Dr. Paul Kelley

“Educational Excellence and Entrepreneurship: A Journey from Teaching to Making Minds”

Paul Kelley is the founder of Monkseaton High School, the first public trust school in the UK. The school, partnered with Microsoft UK, is known for its pioneering approaches in foreign language teaching, the design of the school environment, spaced learning of mathematics and science, and creative uses of technology. Paul has consistently challenged conventional thinking. He has been involved in controversies- notably to do with university admissions- and in his recent book Making Minds (Routledge 2008) questions the underlying assumptions of the education system itself.
