

Call For Course Proposal for Academic Honors and Leadership Tracks of University Honors and Leadership (UHL) Program

University Honors and Leadership (UHL) program is inviting proposals for development of interdisciplinary, pedagogically innovative undergraduate courses for the academic honors and leadership tracks.

UCD Faculty with outstanding teaching records and innovative ideas are invited to propose interdisciplinary courses intended to address the special educational needs of talented, motivated, and curious undergraduates.

Both tracks offer five interdisciplinary courses, with focus on academic honors and leadership education respectively, during the second and third years of the UHL program. The UHL courses will substitute general core requirements of UCD. Course proposals that incorporate required areas in an interdisciplinary manner will be given preference. Team teaching of faculty from various disciplines is highly encouraged. Please refer to the UHL website for more information on the program and the curriculum: www.cudenver.edu/uhl.

The UHL Faculty Steering Committee is responsible for reviewing and selecting the courses to be offered to each cohort.

Support for Course Development: There is an award of $500 for each course selected for development. This award may be used as summer salary, or in a university account and spent in accordance to the university rules and procedures for the development of the proposed course. There must be a commitment to teach the selected courses at least twice.

Support for Teaching UHL Courses: An equivalent of one course release time is available for each UHL course. The faculty have the option to teach the UHL course as compensated overload, as a course buy out from the school/department, or receive the funding in a university account.

UHL Course Objectives and Guidelines: Please refer to the UHL website for guidelines on course objectives for Academic and Leadership tracks:
